Surviving admission registers c.1870-c.1916 for Manchester schools are now available as part of the Manchester Collection on findmypast.co.uk. Free access is available at any Manchester City Council library.

The collection is completely free to use from any Manchester City Council library computer. Access to the index is free from any computer but access to images from home is by credit or subscription.

The majority of pre-1925 admission registers have been microfilmed and these can be accessed at Manchester Central Library – no prior booking required.

Manchester Education Committee

Prior to 1870 school provision was provided on an ad hoc basis by religious, voluntary institutions and private fee paying schools. Britain was very slow to introduce state controlled education in comparison to the rest of Europe. The 1870 Education Act was not meant to introduce sweeping changes to the established system rather it was meant to monitor the provision of education in each area and if necessary build and maintain schools from the rates where there was provision shortfall.

The country was divided in 2500 School Districts and Manchester School Board was established in 1870 with local rate payers elected members onto the School Board. The 1870 Act allowed for women to be voted onto the School Boards and in Manchester Lydia Becker was voted on the School Board where she served from 1870 until her death in 1890. Lydia as a suffragist took a strong interest in improving the education of girls in the city. Becker criticised the domestic education of girls in Manchester's schools saying 'If she had her way, every boy in Manchester would be taught to mend his own socks and cook his own chops'.

The large number of voluntary schools that existed in Manchester in 1870 were largely pronounced efficient by HMIs and it was not until 1875 that the School Board took over its first two schools - Sharp Street Ragged School and St. Matthew's School, Byrom Street [\[M66/14\]](#). The School Boards first new school was built on Every Street in 1876 [\[M66/29\]](#). By the end of 1902 the School Board had built 40 new schools, taken over a further 26 and supervised 89 non-provided schools.

Under its first chairman, Herbert Birley, the School Board was also involved in the provision of education over and above elementary level. By 1903 there were 6 Higher Grade and Science Schools with the largest and most esteemed being the Central School, which opened in Deansgate in 1884.

The School Board began an exhibition fund in 1875 to enable poorer children to attend Higher Grade Schools and in 1891 it was decided that any child passing standard VI would be eligible for support.

Further education provision was made for working people to study in the evenings with Evening Continuation Schools, Science and Art Evening Schools and Commercial Evening Schools. The cause of Women's education was also espoused and eight Evening Institutions for Women and Girls were built between 1891 and 1902.

The voluntary schools largely represented Christian denominations but there were insufficient school places for the increasing Jewish population. A Jewish school was opened by the School Board at Southall Street, Strangeways [\[M66/82\]](#) and as the community increased a second school was built at Waterloo Road, Cheetham [\[M66/91\]](#).

Two schools were established for children with special educational needs at Embden Street [\[M66/28\]](#) and Hague Street, Newton Heath [\[M66/122\]](#) through the influence of Mary Deny who had been elected to the School Board in 1896. In later years these specialist departments were set up else where and were often known as ESN [Educationally Sub-Normal] Schools or later special schools.

The quality of teaching in Manchester schools was improved by the creation of Pupil-Teacher Centres. It is common in log books to find references to the visit and placement of student/pupil teachers.

Manchester City Council has been a Local Education Authority since 1903, when under the 1902 Education Act it became responsible for the provision of elementary education in the City. The Act also charged local authorities with the development of education other than elementary. The Education Committee, appointed by the City Council and composed of council members and co-opted persons, assumed the functions of the existing School Board and the Council's existing Technical Instruction Committee on the 1 July 1903. It was to supervise the running of the Board School, and to a lesser extent, the running of the existing voluntary schools.

The transition from School Board to education Committee was smooth. The Education committee took over the ethos of the School Board, particularly in the provision of secondary schooling with Lady Sheena Simon, Director of the Education Committee as one of the chief advocates of free secondary education in the 1930s. In addition the Education Committee continued to provide for a variety of educational needs. Delicate or sick children were often catered for in schools outside the City, for example Mobberley Open Air School [\[M66/46\]](#) and Abergele Sanatorium School [\[M66/2\]](#).

The Education Committee presided over various reorganisations of schools in Manchester. Breaks in the series of records are found in 1910, when Higher Elementary Schools were reorganised as Central Schools and again when schools were reorganised following the publication of the Hadow Report in 1926. Whereas previously children had often received their compulsory education between the ages of 5 and 14 in a single school the report envisaged separate schools for children over 11. Changes to the nature of secondary schools following the 1944 Education Act, however, are not indicated by a new series of records. Circular 10/65, which encouraged LEAs to move to non-selective secondary education, was followed in Manchester with the creation of comprehensive schools.

After local government reorganisation in 1974 the City of Manchester became a Metropolitan District of Greater Manchester County. The Education officer of the District kept the same jurisdiction as the former City Council's Chief Education Officer. The Greater Manchester County was abolished in 1986 and the Education Department of Manchester City Council continued to have overall responsibility for the organisation of schools in the area. The Education Acts of 1980s saw some LEA responsibilities for the management of schools devolve to governors and head teachers. As a result new classes of records, such as annual reports and financial statements, were created.

Survival and transferral of records

There has never been a legal requirement for schools to permanently retain non-current records. Administrative Memorandum No. 531, 1956 stated that admission registers, attendance registers and punishment books should be kept for three years after completion and that log books should be kept for the duration of the school's existence. If a school is still currently operational it should still hold its own records. At the Greater Manchester County Record Office (with Manchester Archives) we hold records of closed Manchester schools. Although it is common practice for head teachers to transfer records to the Chief Education Officer on the closure of the school, this has not always been the case in the past. The Education Department has passed all the records that it has received to us.

For contact details of schools currently operating in Manchester see:
http://www.manchester.gov.uk/directory/84/school_finder

Unfortunately no admission records survive for the various teacher training colleges administered by the Manchester Education Committee. Manchester Central Library has prospectuses of the Elizabeth Gaskell College, 1960-61, 1966-1977 (347.942733 MAN (207) and a pamphlet on the history of the college, 1971 (f374.09273 EL1). They also hold Alfred Harris Body's 'Silver Jubilee: the Story of Didsbury College', 1970 (370.734273 Bo).

Document Descriptions

Log Books:

The keeping of a school log book or diary was first instituted in 1862. The log book was to be kept by the Headmaster or mistress of the school and was to contain details of events at the school especially those worthy of permanent record in the life of a school. What is recorded in a log book and the amount of detail given is very much dependent on the particular head teacher at the time. In general the log book normally records the appointment and absences of teachers, visits made to the school by such people as the HMI inspectors, student teachers etc, school trips and outings, changes in curriculum, school building or school name etc. It is very rare that individual children are mentioned by name. Where children are mentioned it is generally because a child has either excelled, won an award or scholarship etc or they have been sent to the head for discipline matters, those who have ended up in court for juvenile offences etc.

Admission Registers:

Admission registers are compiled at the time of a child's admission to a school. They record a pupils name, date of birth, address, date of admission and leaving often also included is a parents name and standard reached before leaving. The majority of admission registers have an index at the front of the volume which makes them easy to search. In the M66 collection the dates given for the admission register are the dates of children's admission to the school not their birth dates. Admission registers for technical institutes often include much more information on individual pupils but often are not indexed. Attendance registers have only been kept where admission registers have not survived.

Registers of Summaries:

Registers of summaries give statistical summaries of numbers in attendance at the school on a weekly basis and a yearly overview of the figures. They do not mention individual pupils by name.

Punishment Books:

Corporal punishment was banned by parliament in state schools in 1987. Therefore since this date there has been no creation of punishment books. The punishment book records the date, name of offender, their offence, date of punishment, details of what the punishment was, the teachers signature and any other remarks. As these items contain sensitive information about individuals they are access restricted for 100 years. Please ask the archivist for details. Occasionally certificate books have survived in which it is recorded which teachers have been given authority to administer corporal punishment.

Individual Pupil Records & Examination Results:

Unfortunately, we do not hold such records here. You will need to contact the relevant examination boards who you sat the exams with in order to check whether or not they can provide you with copies of your certificates. (Please note that there may be a charge for this service).

As you may already know, several of the examination boards for GCSE/A-Level qualifications have merged to form new boards in recent years and so you need to be aware of this when tracing your certificates. The current examination boards for England and Wales are as follows:

AQA (Assessment and Qualifications Alliance), formerly AEB, SEG and NEAB
<http://www.aqa.org.uk/>

OCR (Oxford, Cambridge and RSA), formerly UCLES and RSA. OCR
<http://www.ocr.org.uk>

EDEXCEL formerly ULEAC and BTEC
<http://qualifications.pearson.com/en/home.html>

WJEC / CBAC (Welsh Joint Education Committee)
<http://www.wjec.co.uk>

City and Guilds
<http://www.city-and-guilds.co.uk>

Accident Books:

Both staff and pupils used accident books. They record the date, name of person involved in the accident, name of person making the entry, date of accident, nature of accident and any injuries sustained. As these items contain sensitive information about individuals they are access restricted for 100 years. Please ask the archivist for details.

Staff Registers/Staff Books:

Staff registers contain details of staff employed at individual school. The registers give name and address of the teacher, date of birth, type of teaching qualification, name of institution awarding qualification, date of qualification, date on which engaged at the school, last school employed, at where they were formally pupil teachers, date of leaving the school. The dates given in the M66 list are the dates at which the teachers were employment at the school.

HMI Reports:

Inspection was made a condition of grant-aid in 1839. In their report Inspectors wrote their impressions of school visits. Often these reports were copied and later pasted into the log book.

Therefore if you are particularly interested in one school but no loose HMI reports are listed then consult the log book. Inspectors could, and did, comment on a wide range of aspects concerning education: school attendance, the curriculum followed, the quality of teaching, whether pupils turned up regularly or not and any problems with the school building etc.

Manchester Schools Name Index

This index has been compiled to help our users find School Records. Included in this index are all the Manchester City Closed Schools in the M66 collection and the majority of Church Schools for which we hold records. This is not an exhaustive list of all the schools that were operational in Manchester or the Diocese. It was not a legal obligation for schools to keep their records and therefore we do not have records for some schools. The list is also not comprehensive with regard to Church School records. Only those where the collection contains substantial items such as Managers/Trustees Minutes, Log Books, Admission Registers etc. have they been included. The list does not include Sunday Schools.
